Megan has been in the finance/payments industry since 2008. Today, she is responsible for the planning and execution of product launches. Megan has been a Wnet member since 2014. Her enthusiasm and dedication has motivated many members of Wnet. Megan served as the 2017 Atlanta LINC chair and has been a driving force behind its tremendous growth this year. Megan is also active on Wnet's Education and Marketing and Communications Committees.

Megan was awarded the Emerging Trendsetter Award 2017 Career and Leadership Summit. This award celebrates a woman 30 years or younger who has a bright future in the payments industry. The award was given to Megan for her commitment and energy to improving the industry.

She joined at the recommendation of a former colleague, Diane Faro. As a founding member, Diane showed her firsthand the benefit and influence this organization would have on her both professionally and personally. She encouraged Megan to involved with the Atlanta LINC, which Megan said has paid off exponentially.

"The greatest benefit of Wnet has been the networking. This is truly an invaluable forum to meet women from all areas of the industry and it has been amazing getting to know women you might not get to meet otherwise, from across the country and up through the C-Suite. Many of these women I can now call friends. Additionally, I have been provided the opportunity for new careers through my Wnet networking, so I would say that I have my own personal success story," Megan said.

"Even if you are not looking for a career move, there is so much to be gained from being a Wnet member. The webinars, LINC's and the Career & Leadership Summit provide wonderful insight and education that can be used by all women in the workplace, and it never hurts to continue to expand your professional network.," she continued.

As for her advice for current Wnet members?

"Get involved in any way that you can, whether through local LINC's or through the numerous committees. What is great, is that it doesn't require a huge time commitment. It is incredibly rewarding as you can see a difference being made and you really form a bond with the women that you work with. There is nothing better than hearing success stories from events, whether it be an attendee finding a new job or gaining the confidence to speak out about something," Megan said.
